INTRODUCTION.

GREAT difficulty is often felt by the Educational Committees of Co-operative Societies in the selection of books to be added to their libraries. On the one hand are the claims of those who wish to make the library mainly popular and entertaining, whilst on the other side will be some who would desire to bear in mind the wants of the co-operative student. The present publication makes no pretence at deciding between these two ideals, or at holding the balance between them. It has been well said that the special sphere and duty of the co-operative society on its educational side is the education of the citizen. Whatever else a Co-operative Library may contain, it ought at anyrate to include a selection of the best books which the co-operative student will need when he deliberately seeks to educate himself as a co-operative citizen.

The following list has accordingly been prepared to assist the Educational Committees of Co-operative Societies, and others, in making additions to their collections with this object. It makes no pretentions to completeness, and contains only such books, in the English language, as are to be obtained through any bookseller without trouble or search. Nor does it include any works of fiction, poetry, or the drama, with which every library ought to be amply supplied. It aims at nothing more than furnishing a convenient guide to those Educational Committees who desire to ensure that their libraries should contain, among much else, the best books available for the instruction of the young citizen in economics, history, ethics, and political philosophy, and their application to the social problems of the time.

The whole of the books mentioned in the list would cost, net, about £80. Some of them, however, would usually be already on the shelves, and the purchase of the remainder could be spread over several years, according to the amount annually available for the purchase of books. If those works already in the library are marked in the list, and the amount available for new purchases is stated, the Secretary of the Co-operative Union would, if desired, obtain expert advice as to the additions most necessary, and arrange for these to be purchased on the most advantageous terms.

No better method exists for wealthy friends of co-operation to assist its usefulness than to aid in equipping every co-operative society with an efficient library.
